

Five marks. Pick one.

The colors, fonts and voice from brand guide v1 stay the same. Only the mark changes. Concepts 1 and 2 follow the "Field Operations" direction: a covert agency and an executive seal. Concepts 3–5 are different takes on the conglomerate joke. Each concept is shown full size on the pages that follow, along with a one-color version and a favicon-size test.

The Agency

COVERT

A field-operations seal: a 16-point compass star behind a peanut roundel, with "Crop of Now / Field Operations" around the ring. It reads like the badge on a jacket you're not supposed to ask about.

WHERE IT LIVES: Hats, hoodie chest, patches, the "Authorized Personnel" merch line, the site footer.

The Office

PRESIDENTIAL

An executive seal: an arc of 13 stars over an upright peanut, a laurel of peanut leaves, and a ribbon reading SEMPER LEGUMEN ("always a legume"). "Office of the Chairman" sits on the ring.

WHERE IT LIVES: The seal on packaging, the tester-set box, certificates, memos from the Chairman.

Boardroom

1970S CONGLOMERATE

The peanut cut into horizontal bars, next to a wide, flat wordmark and "Incorporated". It looks like a company that owns a lot of silos and a stadium.

WHERE IT LIVES: Site header, letterhead, the annual-report jokes, a clean one-ink tee.

MULTINATIONAL

CROP OF NOW
GLOBAL PEANUT HOLDINGS

The peanut drawn as a globe, with latitude and longitude lines. "Global Peanut Holdings" does the rest. It's world domination by legume, stated calmly.

WHERE IT LIVES: Home page hero, investor-relations bits, stickers, a big back print.

Field Grade AG SUPPLY

A seed-sack stamp: No. 1 Premium, Lot 2026, Net Wt. Substantial. It's the farm side of the conglomerate, and it fits the craft-peanut product line.

WHERE IT LIVES: Peanut packaging and labels, shipping boxes, the Reserve page.
